Many alumni of the ACOFP Future Leaders Program have gone on to assume influential leadership roles within the field of family medicine. They have become directors of residency programs, department chairs, and presidents of medical organizations. They have initiated and led community health projects, engaged in outreach efforts to underserved populations, and become active advocates for healthcare policy change on both state and national levels. Many graduates have become educators themselves, sharing their knowledge and expertise with medical students and residents.

// TESTIMONIALS

“As a new physician in practice, I attended the Future Leaders Conference to gain better insight into myself as a leader. Not only did I gain better insight into my leadership style, but also how to translate that into my current everyday practice of medicine but also in developing my future career path.”

“Attending the ACOFP Future Leaders Conference was one of the best decisions I made during my senior year of residency! I was able to connect with residents and new physicians from across the country and gain perspective and advice on transitioning from residency to my first job.

I was also able to gain leadership skills that I will use throughout my entire career and network with not only other ACOFP members, but also with the ACOFP Board of Governors. I left feeling refreshed and capable of excelling in my soon-to-be role as an attending physician. Thankful for the ACOFP and this experience and would recommend it to any of my colleagues!”

“This conference offered an incredible opportunity to focus on personal growth, enhancing leadership potential, and forging fellowships with other physicians. I can't say enough about how insightful and fun the experience was.”
